

ILC- Australia 2024 UPDATE for ILC GA

ILC AUS MEMBERS

See Appendix 1.

Welcome new ILC Aus members

ILC Aus welcomed two new consortium members:

- EveryAge Counts – a broad-based national coalition of individuals and organisations committed to tackling ageism.
- Ageing Well in Rural and Regional Australia - researchers from Faculties of Science and Health (FOSH), Business, Justice and Behavioural Services (FOBJBS) and Faculty of Arts and Education (FOAE). Focus on rural and remote areas – age friendly communities, rural occupations, workforce, technologies.

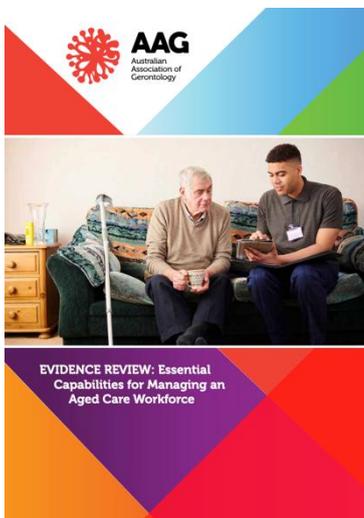

ENGAGEMENT WITH ILC GA

- ILC-GA Co-President – Julie Byles
- International Committee – Julie Byles, Saman Soltani
- Gender Committee – Julie Byles, Claudia Meyer
- Ageism Committee – Marlene Krasovitsky
- LTC – Julie Byles
- PACT – Briony Dow
- GNAFCC – Julie Byles, Helen Barrie
- Climate - Marguerite Bramble
- Communications – Michael Tan

WORK PLAN and KEY PRIORITIES

- Age Friendly Environments
- Diversity
- Work, retirement, lifelong learning
- Workforce
- Ageing Well – policy and practice

FEATURED WORK

Aged Care Workforce

In 2024 ILC Australia identified a new theme of work around the aged care workforce. Aged care workforce has long been a critical issue, but concerns peaked in the early 2020's when staff shortages severely compromised aged care service provision.

ILC Aus members have been working across a range of activities to address this national concern. At a policy level, AAG have produced a working paper on workforce issues

<https://aag.asn.au/libraryviewer?ResourceID=266>

Julie Byles led a team to evaluate the Queensland Home Care Workforce Support Program, designed to attract and support community care workers.

<https://workforce.cotaqld.org.au/evaluation-report/>

Other ILC Aus members have been working on diversity among the aged care workforce.

- Understanding and responding to racism and the provision of culturally safe care by interdisciplinary health professionals in the aged care sector in regional, rural and remote areas: a scoping review. Healthy Ageing Toolkit

The Healthy Ageing Toolkit is a searchable cohort information repository that includes information about ageing cohort studies across the globe (n=287) designed to support the study of healthy ageing and its trajectories, as well as inequities in healthy ageing. <https://www.healthyageing-toolkit.cepar.edu.au/>

Online Self-Assessment of Healthy Ageing

To celebrate United Nations International Day of Older Persons, NARI launched a fully digitised version of the Healthy Ageing Quiz. Funded by the Victorian Department of Health. <https://www.nari.net.au/healthy-ageing-quiz>

POLICY MATTERS

New Aged Care Act for Australia

The new Aged Care Act for Australia will come into effect on July 1, 2025. It will replace the current Aged Care Act 1997 and the Aged Care Quality and Safety Commission Act 2018. The new Act is intended to focus on the rights of older people, improve regulation of services, redesign the funding models, and strengthen quality care standards. ILC Australia participated in multiple consultations concerning the Act and the draft exposure document. A summary of some of the points raised by ILC Aus is available:

Rights of Older Persons in Australia

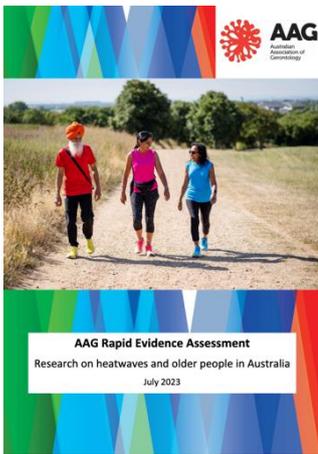

- Australia has a new Aged Discrimination Commissioner, Mr Robert Fitzgerald, a highly respected lawyer, human rights and social justice advocate, and a leading figure in the anti-discrimination space.
- Members of ILC Australia are engaged in discussion with the Australian Human Rights Commission.
- We continue to work on getting support from Australia for processes at the Human Rights Council in Geneva.
- 12 September 2024, the NARI Annual Summit 'Human Rights are Older People's Rights, Too!' provided a perfect opportunity to discuss how older people and their needs should be placed at the centre of the new system.

Position paper: Capturing cultural and linguistic diversity in Australia In this position paper on Capturing Cultural and Linguistic Diversity in Australia, consideration is given to the importance of terminology, the variables used by the Australian Government to measure cultural and linguistic diversity, and the capture of diversity data could be improved.

Research on heatwaves and older people in Australia

The aim of this rapid evidence assessment was to analyse what we know about heatwaves and older people in Australia and to develop recommendations for policy and practice improvements.

<https://aag.asn.au/libraryviewer?ResourceID=120>

AAG is working with partners (NARI, University of Melbourne, RMIT, and the Austin Hospital) through the Melbourne Ageing Research Collaboration (MARC) on a project to examine the barriers and facilitators to older people using cooling centres during periods of hot weather. The 1-year project is funded through the Lord Mayors Charitable Foundation and will explore the use of public facilities, such as libraries or other designated cooling centres by older people, using survey and interview techniques. The project is founded on AAG's rapid evidence review on the impact of heatwaves on older people, and a set of policy recommendations.

The 66th Annual Meeting of the Japan Geriatrics Society

Nagoya, Japan. 07 August 2024

The long tail of prevention in later life. Julie Byles

Healthy ageing is dependent on health promotion and preventive activities across the life course. In the attached presentation I am going to focus on the extent to which we need to extend and adapt these activities all the way through later life and right to death.

NZAG 2024 Conference – Navigating Ageing 28th-30th August

Wellington, Te Herenga Waka, Victoria University.

Julie Byles and Renu Borst from ILC Australia attended the New Zealand Association of Gerontology Conference in New Zealand. The conference theme was Navigating Ageing, a reference to New Zealand's important place in the Pacific and its seafaring peoples, but also to the path of life. The conference was pitched to celebrate older people and included performances by poets, musicians and artists. The meeting was also designed to confront ageism and provide new thinking about ageing, as well as exploring new methods for research and education. The lives and values of Maori people and their families and communities are central to the conference, recognising the importance of cultural values and attachments in all aspects of life, including ageing and care for older people. Julie Byles gave a plenary address on the impact of chronic conditions in older age. In doing so, she also illustrated the role of longitudinal studies in providing evidence and information for understanding ageing, identifying opportunities for prevention and forming policy responses.

A video promo for Julie's presentation is available here.

2024 Elder Law and Capacity Symposium 6th September 2024

Over 100 people gathered at the University of Newcastle's Nuspac building in Hunter Street, and as almost as many joined on-line, to discuss matters of competency and clinical care. The audience were lawyers, clinicians, other professionals and interested members of the public. See submission for ILC GA website.

Debate – Age is no barrier June 2024

COTA Queensland hosted a debate where panelists argued for and against the proposition that “Age is no Barrier”.

The purpose was to highlight strengths and opportunities of ageing, and to identify barriers that get in the way of peoples later lives.

Ageing, Art & Creativity symposium: 29 Sept 2024

This one-day symposium celebrated the transformative potential of the arts in enhancing the lives of older adults. Local and international speakers will shared the latest in research, policy, and practice – including a morning session on dementia and music followed by a talk on access to equity in creative brain health and presentations from creative practitioners and researchers in clowning, photography, dance and art. The afternoon will included poster presentations; a session on becoming creative, led by Prof Julie Byles, AO; two hands-on workshops; and a final panel session. There were opportunities for participation throughout using drawing and digital technology.

The 57th conference of the AAG took part in Hobart in November,

We were delighted by special guest Susana Concorde Harding who attended as the Gary Andrews Fellow.

Susana and Julie made a side trip to Canberra to talk with the Department of Health and Aged Care

The year ended with the face-to-face meeting of the WHO GNAFCC affiliates meeting in Perth, Western Australia. Followed by The Australian Age Friendly National Conference.

Looking Forward to 2025

We are looking forward to joining our ILC GA friends South Africa for the IFA.

We are also looking forward to our next AAG Conference in November 2025.
